Concerning to a distribution of a guideline for food cleaning by the association ENFIT DVTI wants to inform all members not to follow these guidelines. DVTI expects problems about the liability because the situation of contracting is not correct described.

Only the customer will decide by a clear declaration about the services that a cleaning station has to issue.

There for DVTI gives the answer as followed:

We kindly say thank you for your information about the guidelines concerning the food cleaning.

In principle we must say that ENFIT can develop and distribute anything for the members of the own association.

We just want to inform you that a distribution to members of other associations is not arranged and appropriate not authorised. We kindly ask you to refrain such behaviour in the future.

The development of guidelines on the European scene is a part of EFTCO and the national tank cleaning associations.

EFTCO is actually in international discussions about the problems that you are talking about.

As expected the worked out result are different to your guidelines.

We have to remark that the members of DVTI and other national associations get information from your side that are not useful for the daily practice.

So DVTI will advise all members, to wait until the discussions of EFTCO as the expert committee will come to an end and up to this time not to recognize your guidelines.

Of course every cleaning station can decide for themselves which kind of work will lead to a good result.

With kind regards
